A Confession.

It is hard for us country editors to get the hang of city ways. We slept in a room at the Copeland in Topeka with a short grass editor man, and in the morning we noticed him walking around the room in a brand-new night shirt, which we presumed was the first one he ever owned and was anxious that we should appreciate it in all its glory, when we asked him: "Bill, why don't you dress?" He said: "I am waiting for my clothes to cool off?" Walting for your clothes to cool off?" said we, "Yep," said Bill. "I put my clothes on that 'ere thing last night, and this morning it seems to be red hot." He had put his shirt and breeches on the steam radiator, and had to hang them out of the window to cool them sufficiently to craw! Into them.—Concordia (Kan.) Gazette. A Confession.
